TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—South Carolina was one of the thirteen original states. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 1,683,724, which represents an increase of 168,324, or 11.1 per cent, over the 1910 figure. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent. The following summary shows the population of South Carolina from 1790, the first Federal census year, to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—South Carolina has 46 counties, of which 9 show decreases in population as compared with 1910. Five of these decreases, however, are due to reductions in area. Three new counties—Allendale, Jasper, and McCormick—have been organized from parts of six others since 1910. (See Table 1.) It has been necessary, therefore, in preparing the maps on page 3, showing rates of increase or decrease in total and rural population of counties between 1910 and 1920, to combine Allendale, Jasper, Barnwell, Beaufort, and Hampton Counties and to combine McCormick, Abbeville, Edgefield, and Greenwood Counties.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 30,495 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 55.2 (see Table 1), as against 49.7 in 1910 and 44 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The counties of South Carolina are made up of 499 primary divisions, comprising 440 townships, 58 school districts, and the city of Charleston. The secondary divisions are 260 in number, comprising 14 cities and 246 towns. Each of 2 cities is coextensive with the township and 1 city with the school district in which located, and each of 27 towns comprises parts of 2 or more townships. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—South Carolina has 15 cities, of which Charleston, with a population of 67,957, is the largest. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 9,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of South Carolina living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 12.8 per cent in 1900 to 14.8 per cent in 1910 and to 17.5 per cent in 1920.
